QANTAS CUP FEVER STRIKES AGAIN

These players MATT HOSIE (AZZURRI) (left) and JACKIE CORMACK (BARDON) will be in the thick of the action during Sunday's Qantas Cup semi-finals at Perry Park.

HOSIE will be on the job against the Thistle attack, while left winger CORMACK will be after a repeat of his two premierships goals against Hollandia in his Cup match.

Both matches look evenly balanced, but at this stage the most favoured to reach the Cup final, to be played on September 9 are the premierships leaders Azzurri and third team Bardon.

DATELINE: LONDON

From League title and FA Cup medals down to Watney or Texaco awards, the emphasis is on players collecting honors.

But one of the nicest things that has happened in football in the past three years has been the award to the successful managers by a whisky firm.

Every month a panel of leading football journalists casts its vote and a manager from each of the four divisions gets a reward.

At the end of the season one of them gets the coveted Manager of the Year award — I hardly need add that this year it has gone to Bertie Mee, manager of the Cup and League double champs Arsenal.

This is a tremendous competition because it gives managers a chance to grab a bit of the limelight.

And managers are far more important than some people outside the game seem to think.

You can have the best players in the business, but you won't win much unless you had the right man at the helm.

TRADEMARK

Since the war his Manchester United teams have won more trophies than I can count off-hand.

But Matt, and I hope he doesn't mind me calling him that now he has left the manager's chair, never forsook his principles.

He has always maintained open, attacking, entertaining football was the way to please the fans and win the honours and he stuck to this throughout his career.

He stamped his own personality on the team from the moment he took over just after the war and, although the faces have changed since then, the Busby trademark has always been there.

Perhaps the greatest compliment I can pay him is this — when you went out in a Manchester United shirt he was never out of your mind.

I've heard it said Sir Matt has been a bit too soft and easy going with United players.

I only wish the people who uttered this sort of nonsense could have been in our dressing rooms sometimes.

Believe me he can be a mighty hard man and however big you might think you are when he's finished cutting you down to size you know all about it.

Don't get me wrong though.

He'll share a laugh with you, he'll listen sympathetically to any problems you have and do all in his power to help you — but, if you let Manchester United down on or off the field, you can expect a wall to fall on you.

Sir Alf is a different cup of tea altogether.

As the international team manager, he has only to beckon a finger and he can have the best players at his disposal.

But if you believe that has made his job an easy one, you'd better think again.

It brings its inevitable problem of trying to get a side to play together efficiently with very little pre-match preparation.

At club level over the years, you can practically tell what a team-mate is going to do with the ball even before he does it.

That's what hours and hours of practice games and playing together does for you.

RAMSEY SYSTEM

Alf has had to win his success the hard way.

He obviously cannot have his pool of players to work with week in and week out so he has built up a playing system for his teams — and it has worked.

Some people say it is dull, others say it has taken the entertainment out of the game.

I don't go along with this and no one can deny that the Ramsey system has brought results.

England is still one of the most feared football nations in the world — thanks to him.

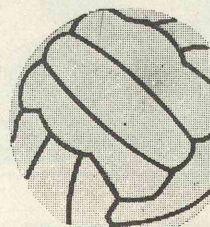

When it comes to dissecting opposition and pinpointing flaws, he's in a class of his own.

England has never gone into an important game without being thoroughly prepared for their opponents.

People have the impression Alf is a bit of a cold fish.

Perhaps he is to people who don't know him, but the lads know he's quite a character.

And I'll tell you this — I don't know an England player who wouldn't run through a brick wall for him.

BRISBANE JUNIORS ROUND-UP

By Stan Dye

UNDER 10 TOURING TEAM

The Under 10 Touring team to take part in the Inter-Cities Championship at Bankstown in August is as follows:— L. Borgo (Mt. Gravatt), S. Swider (Annerley), G. Vittulano (Azzurri), P. Monteith (Gap), O. Smith (Gap), G. Binkley (Annerley), C. Daunt (Oxley), M. Harrison (Gap), G. Stevenson (Hollandia), G. Rosentrater (Mt. Gravatt), G. Chambers (Mt. Gravatt), D. Rouden (Redlands), M. McEvoy (Zillmere), P. Maybanks (Hollandia).

The Co-Managers are Mr. George Harrison B.J.S.A., Fixtures Secretary and Mr. George Harrison from the Gap. The team leaves Brisbane in August 22nd and will compete against other interstate teams in the six day Carnival. Congratulations to the boys chosen and best wishes to them and their Managers for a successful tour.

On Sunday 4th July Redcliffe City played hosts to 7 Toowoomba and 6 Gold Coast junior teams from under 8 yrs. to under 15 yrs. in a day crowded with good class football.

From a kick off at 10.00 a.m. to finishing at 4.15 three fields were continually in use to accommodate 18 games in all. With most teams getting 2 games it made the long trip worthwhile for all concerned.

The game results are insignificant on occasions such as these in comparison with the good will created and promotion of the code. It also affords a good opportunity for officials of these districts to get together informally and discuss their problems.

One would really have to see the Downs & Coast lads play to appreciate the amount of improvement in playing standards over the last couple of seasons and their officials are leaving no stone turned to give their lads the opportunity of playing against more experienced lads.

Arrangements for the day were set in motion over a glass of ale at Perry Park early in June by Henry Benecke, Toowoomba, Ern Westlake, Gold Coast and Stan Stutz, Redcliffe, and followed up with a couple of phone calls and letters backed by a lot of dedicated officials and supporters from each district. Add to this enthusiastic players and you have the recipe for success.

The visit by Toowoomba and Gold Coast will be reciprocated by Redcliffe at Toowoomba on July 25th and at Gold Coast on a date to be arranged.

Reports would indicate that junior soccer is going from strength to strength in almost every area of our vast State and with the interchange of visits between clubs and districts within the State and interstate there is no limit as to the future strength of this code.

Summing up the day saw a great display of soccer by 36 teams of young gentlemen who are a credit to the game and the districts they represent.

FRANK CLARKE RECOVERING

I have good news that Mr. Frank Clarke is making a slow but steady recovery from his recent illness and is still in the Princess Alexandra Hospital. Many messages have been received expressing concern at Frank's illness and extending wishes for a speedy recovery from as far away as Sutherland, Bankstown and Illawarra Associations in N.S.W., an indication of Frank's wide reputation in the Junior Code.

Over the period of Frank's illness Mr. Stan Dye will be Acting Secretary and all correspondence should be addressed to him at 18 Welsh St., Clontarf. Ph. 84 3584.

BARDON v. HOLLANDIA (SUNDAY, PERRY PARK, 1.0)

Unless there is a drastic form reversal, Sunday's early Cup semi-final could be a repeat of the premiership clash between these two teams at Richlands last Sunday.

On that occasion, Bardon's teamwork and perfect understanding between defenders and Carrigan and Sinclair in the middle, was their chief asset.

More amazingly, last Sunday's backline of Patruno, Rowan, Lee and Hickman was strung together for the first time this season after the tall and reliable Geoff Gault was passed unfit.

Martin Coe played with his usual brilliance and is fast developing into the State's most spectacular goalkeeper.

It will be most interesting to see what Jim Binnie does with his defence if Gault is available this weekend.

Ball-player George Fraser was missing last week-end and one of the Bardon youngsters, blonde headed Ken McMillan, did not disgrace himself in company with Jamieson, Young and left winger Cormack.

The latter is every inch a winger and it would not surprise to see Hollandia's attacking fullback Ernie Deavin pay more attention to him on Sunday.

Gary Wilkin's return to the Hollandia side certainly strengthened the midfield but he was a little short of a gallop and obviously will be more of a danger in attack, where Hollandia have been falling down, this time.

Nippy Dale Mortimer was also finding his legs last week, and if Hollandia decide to include the promising youngsters, Jude Kirk or Paul Ray, or even ex-Newcastle forward Barry Ross, their attacking power will increase immeasurably.

Ross in particular was most impressive when he came on in the second half and is not unlike in style a former top Hollandia goalscorer in Nigel McGuckin.

Hollandia almost certainly will suffer if tough centrehalf Sunderland is again unavailable, but the work in the middle will be performed capably again by tall and constructive Van Klaveren.

On form Bardon should reach the Cup final but the outcome will be much closer than last Sunday's premiership match, providing Hollandia can produce the necessary improvement in attack.

AZZURRI v. THISTLE (SUNDAY, PERRY PARK, 3.0)

Before last week-end, Azzurri would have been rated odds-on down Thistle in this one and reach their second constructive Cup final.

But reports from Ipswich state that, with the return of Ancliffe, Thistle improved out of sight and should have beaten Coalstars by a bigger margin than the 2-1 of Sunday's premiership clash at Bundamba.

It is interesting to note that after a long spell in the goalscoring doldrums, big Ritchie Smith found the back of the net the instant that Ancliffe came back into the side.

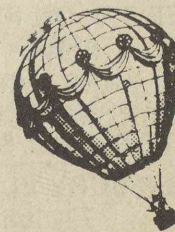

The combination of these two and the opportunism of Pollard and Culhana will be their main asset against the tried and true Azzurri backline.

CUP PREVIEWS CONT'D

Particularly in fine form here are fullbacks, Matt Hosie and Bruno Pinti and uncompromising centre half Ian Perry.

Big Dave Neal was a bit shaky against Hellenic last week in the first half but returned to his reliable self sufficiently in the second half to retain his place for this week.

The big blow for Azzurri of course will be the possible absence of striker Charlie Dench, who was sent off last week and whose presence against Thistle would have enabled Azzurri to retain that tremendous combination up front between Dench, Johnston, Schoendorfer and Connors.

It is likely that if the worst happens, and Dench is suspended, inside forward Billy Haigh would be reinstated following his head-injury, so the Azzurri attack would lose nothing in the way of constructive lead up work.

Thistle, with their four strong back-line of Smith, Keenari, Dann and Allison will compare favourably with Azzurri in defence, and particularly busy will be the consistent Allison, whose blistering speed will adequately cope with the pace produced by Schoendorfer on the wing.

With Alex Anderson possibly out for the rest of the season, Thistle will have problems midfield, and will rely on Alan Bain and Jeff Cornford for possession here.

On last week's display, they could be overshadowed by Peter Nielsen, Gary Clifford and Johnston, who has been proving a tower of strength since he switched back to a deep-lying role.

Azzurri will not have things all their own way, but in view of their strong comeback to down Hellenic last week, must start favourites to move into a Cup final berth.

On the Coaching Scene

THE COACH (By Jim Binnie)

What are the duties then of the coach in the modern soccer set-up? Again this is an opinion which, if article (1) is accepted, will depend on the authority and responsibility delegated to him by the team manager. The fully qualified coach must be given a free hand to prepare his players physically for the task to be performed. This is much deeper than would first appear to the layman. First of all upon qualifying the coach has been made to realise that he will only succeed in his task by using methods of training that will keep the players mentally alert and physically keen to attend sessions. This of course aids the manager in his mental task. Conversely the manager must help the coach by procuring the equipment necessary to prepare a complete programme. By the very nature of his task in using exercises that improve individual player's weak points the coach will evolve ideas of where a player should be used, and will them evolve ideas of the tactics the team could use. The manager who ignores the coaches ideas on this would be very silly. The coach must be of necessity a strict disciplinarian who because his time is limited must attend to the majority of players and pass the troublesome player on to the manager. The manager in turn must make the player see the coach's viewpoint. The coach has been taught how to chart individual progress and must pass this information to the manager to aid that man in his selection task.

To sum up I'd say a coach is probably the most important ally a manager can have, and the manager who ignores this is in trouble before he starts; I'd say that a successful fully qualified coach has only to learn tact and diplomacy to become a first class team manager, so closely are the two jobs allied to one another.

THESE MEN WILL BE IN ACTION AT THE WEEK-END IN THE QANTAS CUP (FROM LEFT) JEFF CORNFORD (THISTLE), EDDIE CARRIGAN (BARDON) & ALEC KEENAN (THISTLE)

It can be seen that the term used in the previous article that of "manager/coach relationship" is now beginning to explain itself. One cannot successfully exist without the other, not on a part-time basis.

1974 WORLD CUP NEWS

Dusseldorf, West Germany, Italy, 1970 beaten finalists and current European Champions, and England, 1966 World Champions, were comfortably drawn when the European groupings for the 1974 World Soccer Cup were made here.

With host Nation West Germany, already qualified to play in the finals, the remaining 32 European entries were drawn into nine groups.

The winners of the first eight groups will qualify for the finals while the top team in group nine must battle for a place against either Peru, Chile or Venezuela.

The Italians were drawn in group two, where they could be troubled marginally by the much-improved Swiss side, but should have no difficulties against unrated Turkey and Luxembourg.

England, in group five, will be facing Wales, against whom they have not lost for the past 16 years, and Poland, who were beaten for a place in the 1970 finals by Bulgaria in the qualifying competition.

One of the toughest tussles should occur in group three, which will match Belguim against Holland, both seasoned campaigners, with Norway and Iceland destined for elimination.

Belguim and Holland have proved their worth at club level, with Dutch sides having won the European Cup for the past two years and hoping to retain the World Club Trophy through Ajax.

-LEAD FIFA 2 DUSSELDORF

In the group nine the hard Soviet team should overcome France and Ireland, though their unimaginative approach could lead them into trouble against either Peru, former champions Chile or Venezuela for a place in the finals.

Sir Stanley Rous, FIFA President, was asked after the draw whether he considered the selection fair.

"I didn't hear any sounds or explanations of horror when they saw the names go up on the board and I think it will go fairly well," he said.

"There will be no easy passage to Germany in 1974," he added.

The non-European groupings, submitted by the various regional Federations and accepted by FIFA, were announced last night.

In answer to a question whether he was satisfied with the non-European nations not submitting to a draw, Sir Stanley said the organisers were pleased that delegates from other continents had arranged the groupings among themselves;

"They know much better than we do which countries should be put together for geographic or other reasons... They know the best strength of the teams in their areas," he said.

A REPETITION OF LAST YEAR?

Will this be a repeat of last year's Qantas Cup final? This photo was taken last year in teeming rain as Hollandia provided the major upset of the season by downing Azzurri in last year's Qantas Cup final.

They could well meet each other again this year, if Azzurri can defeat Thistle and Hollandia can account for Bardon in Sunday's Cup semi-finals.
