GEOFF STEAD

Over the next month, Australia is set to host the biggest spectacular of senior soccer ever in this country.

If the promoters are true to their word, we will see near full strength sides from some of the most famous clubs in the world.

For some, it will be the only opportunity in their lifetime to see players they otherwise would only watch on television or read about in magazines.

Indeed, the eyes of every sports enthusiast, and probably a lot of others as well, will be on soccer.

And the code could well live or die on the success of the tournament. And that does not necessarily apply solely to our on-field performances.

Many of soccer's critics, both within and outside of the sport, will be closely watching the numbers in the stands. If soccer can be seen to stage a successful international tournament, we will be the envy of the other football codes and will appeal as an attractive proposition to potential sponsors and supporters.

Australian soccer officials have done their part by getting these top sides to Australia. Now it is up to the public and the media to give the tournament the support it deserves.

In 1981, the world youth championships were half over before many people, the major media outlets of some capital cities included, realised how big and exciting the tournament was.

In Brisbane, for example, the newspapers did not wake up to what they had on their hands until the final qualifying match here.

Hopefully, we will not see a repeat of that this time.

But it is up to the soccer public to turn out in their thousands and prove that soccer in Australia is big, we are a sizeable market, and we deserve attention.

If the crowds stay away from the tournament, and sadly many people are already mumbling that they don't intend to go, it will be a long time until we are given the opportunity to watch overseas teams of this calibre again.

Points to ponder

A mere coincidence? Last Monday, with the morning and afternoon papers filled with speculation about Harry Noon's future at Lions, one club official received an unexpected phone call from no other than Simon Kistemaker, last year's coach who broke his contract by staying in Holland. Kistemaker, wasn't looking for his old job back though, but had rung merely to say "hello". The Dutchman, by the way saved First Division club Volendam from relegation, a feat which won him the coaching job at the much better credentialled NEC Breda.

One soccer scribe around town is playing things very cool at the moment. Six of the eight journo's in his department have wives either pregnant or just had babies. They're blaming the coffee at the office, which has given our man a great excuse to go out and have a stronger drink instead.

Next month's special general meeting, to make official this year's restructuring, could be even more interesting than those marathons of last November and December. While some clubs, flushed with their new found success will no doubt support the adoption of the changes, several others who haven't gone quite as well may take a new stance. No doubt, the lobbying in the preceding weeks will again be vital.

Wynnum must be playing the seven dwarfs in their defence. A recent match report, on the Wolves' clash with Olympic, contained the sentence "... with Olympic striking back in the second half when Craig Low outleapt Wynnum's defence to head home a freekick." We know Craig's a real flier, but ...

Many were chuckling at a Sunday morning Commercial League match recently when a well-known referee turned up without his whistle.

A FEAST OF SOCCER AT ALL LEVELS

By GREG RUSSELL

A feast of top soccer, both locally and across the nation, will be served over the next month.

And the program has the potential to be the most exciting and entertaining ever. Key matches will be played at all levels which should satisfy even the most ardent of the code's followers.

The international tournament is set to grab the majority of headlines, but the excitement is set to carry through to the National League, the Premier League and even the amateur divisions.

While Brisbane will get to see European Cup winners Nottingham Forest, Scottish giants Rangers, talented Greek side Iraklis and both Australian teams, we also will get visits from two of the most open and attacking sides in Sydney.

Sydney Croatia and Marconi are grouped with Brisbane City and Lions in the NSL Cup and will play games on dates to compliment the international tournament.

Despite their lowly position on the NSL table, Croatia showed on their last visit to Brisbane they are entertaining to watch and good value opponents.

Marconi too have some of the most skilful players in the country and former national coach Les Scheinflug has amassed a team which is certain to be among the honours at the end of the year, despite its poor start to the season.

And the Premier League excitement continues this weekend.

Ipswich United travel down the road to Bundamba to play Coalstars in the Clash of the Coalmen. To steal a famous quote: The match won't be a matter of life and death, it's much more important than that.

And that's not the only big Premier League match coming up.

There's the big derby between Easts and Mount Gravatt and Olympic's return to Lanham Park, where Mark McNaughton broke his leg last year.

Then of course there's the First round of the Ampol Cup on June 16 and 17 — a straight knockout to be included in the final 16 to go into an FA Cup-style draw for the first time ever.

Action from last year's Lang Park match between Australia and England. Soccerer Alan Davidson tries to clear as Paul Walsh scrambles in the England goal, while John Gregory (No. 7) watches.

In the Intermediate League, there's a Lions-City derby this weekend and the exciting clash between Redlands and Sunnyside the following week.

The first Division has turned into a great competition and clashes between Kingsridge, St. Albans, Salisbury, Annerley and Souths over the next few weeks will be matches not to miss.

And anyone still looking for entertainment can dip into the lower divisions and watch Brighton or Oxley (Division Two), Greenbank or Logan City (Division Three) or North Pine (Division Four) to name but a few sides playing good football at their level.

Indeed, it is more than a football feast. For the soccer enthusiast, it is nothing short of a banquet.

We just want to say a big, big

IT'S A BATTLE TO RULE THE ROOST IN IPSWICH

By TED JEFFERIES

Like two wild bucks set to fight to the death for territorial advantage, Coalstars and Ipswich United will lock horns in the Premier League match of the season at Bundamba on Sunday.

Plucky Coalstars have been the pacesetters of the competition for much of the early season, yet Ipswich United have slowly but surely increased their momentum and are in the mood to steam-roll anyone who gets in the way of their championship bid.

It's the classic confrontation — the Clash of the Coalmen — where tradition runs second only to pride.

There have been some great clashes between these two sides since Coalstars came into being in the early 60's. Although I could be wrong, I seem to recall the first clash between the two sides (remembering of course that United were then St. Helens — and for my money should be again) was at the old Blackstone ground.

I remember both sides scored a goal and suspect that's the way it finished.

But who will ever forget the return clash at Ebbw Vale?

Coalstars raced to a 4-0 lead at half-time and it could nearly have been five. Ian Johnstone, lean, fast and fiery, cracked a shot from well out. It was racing goalwards when ref Arthur Harper blew for halftime. A split second after the whistle had stopped the ball tore into the net.

That wasn't to be the only surprise of the day. Saints Merv Page and Col Kitching came out of the break like men possessed and took Ross Kelly to the cleaners and St. Helens fired our into the net to grab a draw.

Another game between the two clubs which springs to mind was the clash at the Exhibition Ground in 1967, I think. Saints won 4-2 but not before Col Kitching was put into hospital with broken ribs, courtesy of Charlie Hughes, if I remember correctly.

Team-mates then, but Kevin Caldwell (left) and Alan Marszalek (centre) and Wayne Warren will be opponents in the Ipswich derby on Sunday.

Those were the days though. Players like Brian Topfer, Les McCrea, Duncan McKenna, Stu Dedman and a bloke called John McIntosh were the stars.

The rivalry continued into the seventies, but Coalstars dominated many matches of that era.

It wasn't until the emergence of the "young" Wayne Warren and Jeff Dann in the mid-70's that St. Helens came back to the fore.

And in 1976 they gained revenge. It was at Bundamba, Coalstars needed to win to avoid relegation. Dieter Klose, I think it was, awarded a corner which Coalstars protested bitterly had been a goal-kick. From the kick, Peter Gemmell rose to head a goal which sent Stars tumbling to relegation.

I am told Gemmell later transferred to Coalstars, but there's no truth in the story that he was never allowed into the dressing room.

The advent of the State League virtually ended Ipswich derbies, although the two clubs have clashed at lower level on a few occasions.

The last derby is thought to be an Ampol Cup match at Ebbw Vale in 1979, which Ipswich United won 2-1. If that's the case then Coalstars have a further score to settle.

It's certain to be a classic, but a final word of warning. If the match ends in a draw, don't say you're from Brisbane!

TED JEFFERIES

TALKING TOUGH SOCCER

I have been told, off the record, what the Queensland players were paid for the recent interstate game. And if the low, low figure I was leaked is correct, it is no wonder some of the players didn't put in their all.

Sure, I can accept the argument that there is a certain prestige and honour in playing representative football, but that argument is as old as the W-M formation.

There are very few top level sportsmen in the world today that aren't there for the dollar.

And while our Queensland players may only be part-timers, they are also semi-professionals who expect fair payment for the time they put in.

I am sure the New South Wales players got considerably more than the Maroons.

I am not advocating unrealistic match payments, because I think that is what is killing Australian soccer at the moment, but let's be a bit fair.

If those players were the best 14 in the state, then pay them for being that.

TED JEFFERIES is an independent contributor. His views are not necessarily those of Go Soccer nor of the Queensland Soccer Federation and its officials.

and let it be an incentive to those that missed out.

Several letters across my desk of late have criticised my apparent negative approach. That's those writers' opinions. But just to keep everyone happy — here's something positive.

The Premier League at the moment is great.

While I don't think the standard has improved any on last year, the unpredictability of the competition has. And that makes for an interesting League.

I must admit, I have used the Premier League in recent weeks to bring me back to life after ploughing through several NSL matches.

What, with Joe Gilroy playing two strikers, and Harry Noon not doing much better, I can see the Premier League far outdrawing the NSL clubs — if they aren't already.

GO SOCCER

FOR THE JUNIORS

This week, the Go Soccer juniors column, takes time out to spare a thought for those "Soccer Mums" — the ones who put up with so much through the winter months. After last week's I'm Only A Dad poem, here's the other side of the story.

I'M ONLY A MUM by Mrs. D.J.L.

I'm only a mum and I'm feeling quite numb from the Soccer that's played at our home, from daylight to dark our backyard's a park — plants flattened, head knocked off the gnome!

And if I should call "Dinner"
as Dad sets up a winner which he misskicks with angry shout, son bursts into laughter saying "Let's finish it after and I'll show you what Soccer's about".
I listen with dread for that football boot tread, did they lose their Saturday game?
"WE WON, MUM" they shout and both dance about,
(the carpet will never be the same).
So next week I'm going and they'll both be showing the finer points of the game to me, and I just might become a real football Mum, can't beat them, their join them-agree?

The European Football Union (UEFA) has ruled that Roma's left back Aldo Maldera would miss the European Champions Cup final against Liverpool at the Rome Olympic Stadium on May 30.

Maldera was booked for the second time this season in the second leg of Roma's semi-final with Dundee United of Scotland and collected an automatic one match ban.

Roma were also fined 10,000 Swiss francs (about $5,000) for supporters who invaded the pitch after the victory over Dundee United.

Three clubs were sanctioned for fireworks thrown by supporters.

UEFA ruled that the Yugoslav club Hajduk Split would have to play their next European Cup match on a ground at least 300 kms from Split while Juventus were fined 50,000 Swiss francs (about $23,980) and the Portuguese club Porto were fined 2,500 Swiss francs (about $1,200).

Nottingham Forest of England were fined 1,000 Swiss francs (about $490) for bottle throwing.

PREMIER LEAGUE — ROUND 7

WYNNUM v TARINGA

Maramba Stadium, Sunday, 3 p.m.

TEAMS

These were the two teams a lot of people said would struggle in the new Premier League — and haven't they taken great delight in proving everyone wrong!

Both clubs are prime examples to show that the restructuring committee knew what it was doing.

The two clubs, unlike some others, refused the temptation to spend big in the transfer market and instead have turned to their established players and the clubs stocks of youngsters.

Both coaches admit there is still plenty of work to do before their sides can be major forces in the competition. But every odd game their players turn in a blinder.

The two teams seem to play better against the more fancied sides, but this is a game they both would have been counting on winning. So both should be flat out.

This one could be a real entertaining affair, and a draw would not surprise.

In recent years, a player was not a true blue Mount Gravatt man until he had played a season at Easts — and vice versa.

The list of players who have turned out in both club's colours is too long to mention.

And therefore, matches between the two clubs are always special affairs.

Mount Gravatt probably have had the edge in past season, but Easts have never given in without a fight. Who will ever forget the marathon preliminary final between the two clubs at Perry Park several years ago?

The QSF had to change the rules to ensure a result.

For some of the new boys at Mount Gravatt, it will be their first Southside Derby — and Easts are certain to initiate them with one or two "sort them out" early tackles.

But good football is more likely to be the order of the day here. And the Hawks could be a little too quick for the struggling Tigers.

PREMIER LEAGUE — ROUND 7

ACACIA RIDGE v NORTH STAR

Perry Park, Sunday, 3 p.m.

TEAMS

When North Star played Ipswich United at Perry Park in the second round, Ross Swan found the net twice.

And with the lure of the leading goalscorer prize, Swan no doubt will be looking for another pair when he returns to soccer headquarters this week.

The former Grange Thistle youngster is thriving on the pinpoint service he is getting from Jim Hermiston, and Swan will be hard to stop.

But Acacia Ridge have some solid, uncompromising defenders in Steve Donald, Gary Weir and Ian Proud. And of course, goalkeeper Brett Beves has been in fine form.

North Star's strength also is its defence, and the Ridge's Steve Gallagher is certain to have a keen duel with Mike McEvoy for the high ball.

If Hermiston is at his best, North Star could be a little too classy in this one.
