GO SOCCER EDITORIAL

By Go Soccer Editor

GEOFF STEAD

A seven-week suspension for a foul and abusive language charge appears, on the surface, a harsh penalty.

But offending players really have no excuses.

The rules have been made quite clear in recent weeks and officials at all levels have let it be known that bad language would not be tolerated.

The disciplinary committee should not be criticised for taking a tough-line approach. But the committee must be uniform in its decisions.

On the same night the seven-week suspension was handed down, two other players appeared on foul and abusive language charges.

One received three weeks and the other only one.

How can one incident be seven times worse than the other?

Obviously it wasn't. And while our investigations reveal there were other circumstances taken into consideration before the hefty penalty was handed down, the player in question had a right to feel he was harshly treated in comparison with the others.

If there is going to be a crackdown on foul language, and federation officials still maintain an instruction to do so has not been issued, then let the penalty be standardised.

Points to ponder

Olympic's decision not to buy Mark Barry at the bargain fee of $1800 raised a few questions about the financial position of the club. It seems though Olympic have now missed their opportunity and it would not be surprising to see other clubs move in for the talented youngster in the future as his appeal-set fee was for a move anywhere, not just to Goodwin Park.

Following our "Year of the Hawk" remark in an Ampol Cup story last week, one Mount Gravatt official has asked whether it meant the Prime Minister would be at the Final. He seems to have popped up at so many other sporting events. I guess it's over to you Ian!

Don't be surprised if a decision is made to stick with the 2.45 p.m. kick-offs rather than switch back to 3 p.m. later this month. The earlier finish has made a number of administrative and media duties easier to complete within the necessary deadlines.

If hefty penalties for foul language are to be imposed, then let it be across the board.

Let's not make an example of one or two players in a bid to deter the others.

Players will only lose further respect for the rules if they believe they have been treated unfairly.

Moves by some southern clubs to oust Brisbane City and Lions from the national competition should be nipped in the bud by NSL and ASF officials.

Despite what they may think, the powerful southern ethnic clubs do not control Australian soccer. Nor is the National League in operation for their sole benefit.

Every club official should be in the game to help promote the code in Australia, not build a mini empire of his own, as the comments of some officials indicate.

By restricting the national competition to just Sydney and Melbourne, soccer will lose the one aspect that could one day gain it a major footing in Australian sport — the fact that it spans so many states.

The last thing Australian soccer needs is an elitist competition for the country's ethnic communities.

Our item some weeks ago referring to the coach who had earned the name "Adolf" brought a response from the person in question. He rang to inform Go Soccer that there was no truth in the story and his nickname certainly wasn't Adolf. It was "The Fuhrer", he said.

Som fans are never happy. At a north-side ground recently a visiting team was awarded a freekick when the opposing goalkeeper ran well out of his area to foul a fast-breaking winger. The team's supporters were happy with the freekick decision until they watched the ball carry on and some time after the whistle had gone, slowly roll into the goal. The fans, who have quite a reputation for creating disturbances, abused the referee for not allowing the goal — which would have given them a draw. Needless to say had the ball rolled wide of the goal, there would have been no complaints.

LIONS HAVE "HIDDEN ACES"

The Brisbane Lions Intermediate League team could have several "hidden aces" for the Ampol Cup Final against North Star at Perry Park on Sunday week.

Amid little publicity, former National League team players Phil Redmond, John Ogden and David Cork have resumed training after operations on injuries.

And although their progress is at this stage only slow, there is a possibility at least one of the trio could be available for selection for the Cup final.

That could give the Intermediate Leaguers an even more powerful squad.

When Lions beat Acacia Ridge 1-0 in their semi-final, they fielded no less than eight players who had worn an NSL shirt.

By the time they go in against North Star, that number could have risen with Bob McSkimming coming back to the team and Michael Tonner being given a taste of the top league.

With either Redmond, Ogden or Cork in the squad, Lions would have to go in as favorites.

But that is a tag club officials are desperate to avoid.

A UNITED BRISBANE?

The prospect of fielding a "united" Brisbane National League team has again come to the fore.

And while talk of a Brisbane United NSL team has often featured in soccer conversations in the past, it generally has been in relation to a third NSL team.

Now the argument has taken on a whole new light.

A united Brisbane team, using the best players from City and Lions, may be Queensland's only chance of staying in the national competition.

Speculation is rife in Sydney and Melbourne that the country's most powerful clubs will turn their backs on the Queensland and South Australian NSL teams and form a "national competition" of their own.

The clubs claim the cost of two Brisbane sides in the NSL is not warranted.

But one Brisbane team would be a cheaper and more acceptable idea — and would still keep Queensland in contact with the country's best league.

Officials from the two Queensland clubs — which clash again in another derby at Spencer Park on Sunday — say a joint team has been discussed in the past — but only informally.

North Star are not really concerned whether they go in as favorites or not. Coach Iain Fagan is quite confident: "We are going to win."

He watched Lions in their semi-final and is certain that if North Star play to its full ability, Ampol Cup Final day will be the most successful in the club's history.

It all makes for a great final. Be there, Perry Park, Sunday August 19.

Lions' Phil Redmond — one of the club's Cup "hidden aces" — in action in the derby earlier this year with City's Bobby Hamilton. The pair could be team-mates in a united Brisbane NSL team.

One club, almost certainly Lions, would have to relinquish its ground as an NSL venue. Then the two clubs would have to come to an agreement over the split of gate, bar and canteen takings.

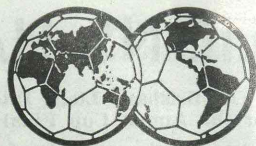

Obviously there would be a lot of problems.

But would they be as devastating as the problems which would confront the two clubs, and indeed Queensland soccer, if we found ourselves out of the National competition next year?

And the benefits of a joint Queensland team could be quite immediate. Imagine a virtual Queensland side competing each week.

SOCCERWORLD

Carlos Alberto Parreira, former manager of Brazil's national soccer team, has been offered a three-year contract in the United Arab Emirates.

Parreira, who resigned in March as the national squad manager and recently led Rio's Fluminense to their 1st national league title, said he would meet Arab officials in New York to discuss the terms of the offer.

"The money and the benefits they want to offer me are something out of this world. However, I worked in Kuwait for seven years and I will leave Brazil again only under highly exceptional conditions" he said.

Manchester have agreed a fee of £100,000 with Sheffield Wednesday for Tony Cunningham, the 26-year-old forward Wednesday signed from Barnsley early last season for £80,000.

City also hope to sign David Phillips, the Wales international full-back, from Plymouth Argyle later this week.

Tottenham were fined £7,500 by the Football League for fielding a weakened side in a first division game at Southampton. The game came 48 hours before Spurs faced Anderlecht in the UEFA Cup final first leg in Brussels — and Paul Miller, a defender, was the only player to start both games.

Alan Everiss, a West Bromwich Albion director, admitted afterwards: "The commission was most impressed with the lucid way Tottenham presented their case and was very mindful of Spurs' success in Europe and the contribution it made to the reputation of British football in general. Unfortunately we had no alternative but to uphold the regulations."

Douglas Alexiou, the Tottenham chairman, said: "We submitted that, taking into account all the circumstances, we fielded our best available side. Graham Roberts was suspended for the game, while others were ruled out by injury. We also pointed out that we had tried several times to change the fixture."

Former Newcastle manager Arthur Cox has been named manager of relegated Derby County, the club which almost closed in mid-season. Cox turned down offers of a higher salary from other clubs.

Cox, who steered Newcastle to the first division in the past season, dropped a bombshell when he resigned from St. James' Park.

A Letter to the Editor . . .

Dear Sir,

I hope I am not put in a position of being called a constant whinger and although I am speaking on behalf of Olympic United, this has nothing to do with any of their officials.

Their last match against Ipswich United was one of the worst I have seen since Olympic played Grange Thistle last year when Mark McNaughton had his ankle broken.

The official, or referee as he was called, was out of touch. I do not wish to do him harm in any way, but when you have two players taken out inside five minutes then another kicked on the head — surely that's not soccer.

I'm not saying the referee is mainly to blame as he has two linesmen to help him. But what were they doing? Nothing. Surely they were bound to have seen a few of the other fouls.

The match was only underway 10 minutes when an Ipswich player fouled Tom McGregor pretty badly. About five minutes after that Craig Low pushed the ball around the same player and was tackled so badly it nearly put him out of the game. And other Ipswich players were equally as bad.

Also Ipswich's goal was a deliberate handball and one of their officials agreed with me.

It is time administrators woke up and did something. Two weeks ago young Shane Plazibat had his ankle broken at Perry Park.

If the sport is to survive, start now. Finally, after reading Mr. N. A. Brown's article "Give Youth a Go" (ASW, July 24) I think his point was reasonable but mentioning that it wouldn't be printed in Brisbane was wrong. I have had most of my articles printed in Go Soccer and Australian Soccer Weekly.

In no way do I want to do the game any harm, after having played it for over 20 years. I just hope I can put something back into the game. But I do like to see players, irrespective of who they are, being protected.

To me soccer is the more skilful of all ball games. You play it hard, but clean.

Mr. S. McGregor, Inala

"DESERT PELE" DAZZLING IN LA OLYMPIC SOCCER

At the Rose Bowl stadium the other night, the Brazilian Olympic soccer team must have thought they were playing against a mirror.

For a while, everything the Brazilians did, their opponents from Saudi Arabia did the same.

There was the intricate touch-play, the circus-like ball-juggling, the explosive attacks.

There was even a young Saudi player they call "The Desert Pele" — as much for his skills as for his resemblance to the former Brazilian maestro.

And in the grandstands, American fans were astonished and amused by white-robed Saudi supporters, swaying and dancing to the beat of tom-tom drums, Brazilian-style.

For those who know the Saudis, it was no surprise. For years, until recently, their team was coached by Brazilians, including none other than former World Cup coach Mario Zagalo.

For the strictly religious Saudis, in the words of the holy Moslem Koran, "There is only one God."

In soccer there is only one Brazil and, though the young Saudi players would never admit it, lining up against the yellow-shirted Brazilians must have been like facing 11 gods.

But the Saudis put up a good show, losing 3-1 in style to a magical team which could have been mistaken for a World Cup side.

The "Desert Pele", real name Majed Abdullah, lived up to his nickname when he launched a solo run in the second half and looked bound to score after ghosting past two defenders.

He was tripped as he did so, but coolly netted the spot kick. Majed's fellow striker, the lanky Muhaisin Al-Dousari, also displayed his talents on several occasions, including a crashing shot against the bar in the first half.

Soccer has taken over from camel-racing and falconry over the past few years as the number one sport in Saudi Arabia, with millions of petrodollars poured into the building of new sports complexes.

In the Koran, the Prophet Mohammed advised Moslems to teach their children three sports — swimming, archery and horsemanship — but more recently, soccer and other sports have swept the kingdom.

The latest fad is a desert version of skiing, known as sand sliding.

According to an official Saudi brochure issued "The art of sand sliding is mastered only by those who are the youngest and lightest in weight.

"The trick is to climb a large, smooth red sand dune, sit on a 50x50 centimetre cafeteria food tray and then hold on for dear life."

TED JEFFERIES

TALKING TOUGH SOCCER

Mount Gravatt can have no excuses for being tumbled out of the Ampol Cup. No team and certainly not a Premier League side — should miss four penalties.

Despite what the newspapers wrote, the way I saw it Mount Gravatt had ample opportunities to go well ahead in normal time.

Sure, North Star territorially had the better of the second half, but Stu Woodruffe really only ever looked like being beaten once.

On the other hand Jim McIntyre could have finished with a hat-trick had his goal compass been on line.

But when it came down to penalties, Mount Gravatt were psyched out.

Hopefully though the defeat has driven home a very valuable lesson for the Hawks.

None has a mortgage on winning and its about time a few Mount Gravatt players began putting in some more effort.

The deferred Premier League game between Ipswich United and Mount Gravatt should have been switched to Perry Park as an Ampol Cup curtain-raiser.

While Ipswich would no doubt complain they would be losing home ground advantage, the club should be reminded that they were given favourable treatment by the federation in the allocation of venues in the Ampol Cup quarter-finals.

The club reaped the bar and canteen benefits of a double header that day.

The QSF management committee allocated the Cup ties to Ipswich that day for the benefit of soccer.

GO SOCCER ALLSTARS

Brisbane Lions have nine players among the rankings in this week's Go Soccer Allstars team.

The players come from not only the club's National League side, but also their Intermediate League team which has had a successful run in the Ampol Cup.

Lions' opponents in the Cup final, (to be played on Sunday week,) North Star, have four representatives in the rankings, including two No. 1 places in the central defence.

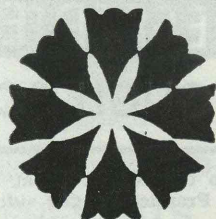

New faces in this week's rankings, as judged by our panel of experts in matches over the past three weeks, include Thistle keeper Gordon Otto, North Star fullback Steve Rowell, Lions youngster Simon Ireland and his midfield team-mate Mick Tonner and exciting young North Star striker Jarrod Austin.

This week's rankings are:

NEWMARKET NEWS

By BOB WHITE

This month's personality is the club's senior vice-president, Jack di Trapani (pictured below).

Jack's involvement during the near five years he has held the position has not been confined to his duties as senior vice. He has served, and still is, on the building and disciplinary sub-committees, of which he is chairman.

He also is team manager of the under 13 Division side.

Jack's wife, Sandra, is the club's assistant secretary and has held that position for several years.

Sandra also is heavily involved in the running of the club's fund-raising committee.

The "Dit" family have three sons playing for Newmarket. The eldest, Robert (a past winner of the Colt of the Year award), is a member of the club's top side, the Intermediate League.

Second son Paul (also a winner of the Colt of the Year award) is the Reserve team squad with youngest son Antoni a member of the under 13 Div. 1 team.

COMING CLUB EVENTS

1. End of Senior season BBQ and disco night. This evening will be held immediately following the final fixture against Valley Trident. The finalists for the German and Nottingham Forest awards will be announced that night.
2. Junior break-up is on Sunday, October 7, at McCook Park.
3. Club dinner dance and trophy presentation night is on Saturday, October 20. See any committee member regarding tickets.

PREMIER LEAGUE — ROUND 15

COALSTARS v NORTH STAR

Bundamba, Sunday, 2.45 p.m.

Referee: JEFF HOLROYD

TEAMS

It's the battle of the Stars here and there will be plenty of talent on display.

The list of former NSL players includes Jim Hermiston, George Potter, Billy Wilkinson, Kevin Caldwell and Peter Tyson.

And then there's other experienced players like Jim Cameron, Ian Gentles, Archie Fraser and Dave Wheeler.

With that amount of footballing ability on the park, this could be an exciting match to watch.

But North Star are the team of the moment and they will be keen to warm-up for next week's Cup final with a resounding victory.

Coalstars have levelled off after their bright start and have been picking up odd points without setting the world on fire.

It could take North Star a while to breakthrough, but once they get on the scoreboard they could add a couple.

Despite their lowly position, Wynnum have done well in their first season back in top company.

The club used its finances to improve facilities rather than buy players and put their on-field faith in last year's squad, plus a few promising youngsters.

Their football at times has been sparkling, although the results have not come their way.

But now the Wolves find themselves in a relegation battle against Taringa.

And Easts are the only side Wynnum will play in the final four fixtures that Taringa won't.

Figuring that they lose to the same teams and play a draw when they clash with Rovers next week, Wynnum must beat Easts to guarantee safety.

But Easts are the form team of the second round and now are a whisker away from the semi-finals.

It is unlikely the Tigers will falter now, and although Wynnum will fight all the way, it looks like an Easts win.

PREMIER LEAGUE — ROUND 15

TARINGA R. v OLYMPIC UTD.

Speare Oval, Sunday, 2.45 p.m.

Referee: LEE HANNA

TEAMS

For Taringa coach Iain Kesson, this match will have an added significance.

It was to Olympic that Kesson lost last year's Premier League grand final, when he was coach of Lions.

Some of his former Lions youngsters are also with Olympic. Graham Wilson, Tom McGregor, Craig Low and Andy Ogden have played under Kesson.

But whether the astute Scotsman has the players at Taringa to pull off a tactical coup and upset Olympic remains to be seen.

But if Rovers are going to play in the Premier League next year, they must start winning.

They cannot rely on Wynnum losing matches. The ball is in Rovers court and it will be interesting to see what Kesson can get out of them.

On their home turf a draw is the best Taringa might achieve.
