"In my book it's the only way to fly."

In Barbara Taylor Bradford's best-selling novel her heroine flies by private jet.

And though such privileges are denied even the most successful writer, while in Australia, Ms. Taylor Bradford discovered a suitable alternative.

Australian Airlines Business Class. While it may not be a private plane, it provides efficient business travel for little more than the normal economy airfare. Priority check-in and baggage handling minimise fuss in the terminal.

Upfront seating allows for faster exits and entrances. The separate Business Class section enables you to work with minimal distraction.

The extra legroom, special menus and complimentary bar service make for true relaxation.

Especially after a hard day of business or book promotions. As for flexibility of scheduling, here too the private jet has almost met its match.

Because Australian Airlines offers over 150 Business Class flights every day.

Who knows? In the interest of efficiency, Barbara Taylor Bradford's next heroine may well decide to travel Business Class instead.
